SING-ALONG WITH KPOV AND THE BEATLES AT THE COMMONWEALTH PUB

IT'S A FUNDRAISING CELEBRATION OF THE RADIO STATION'S 21ST BIRTHDAY

By Richard Sitts

Do You Want to Know a Secret?"

The Central Oregon community is going to "Come Together" for the fabled and fabulous KPOV radio station and its 21st "Birthday" Beatles Sing-Along on Friday, June 26, from 7-10pm.

"Why Don't We Do It In the Road?"

Nah! There's a much better location at The The Commonwealth Pub in Bend. This happening is a fundraiser for community radio station KPOV, 88.9FM, which is volunteer powered and listener supported.

Tickets are for sale on the KPOV website — kpov.org — with early ticket discount until June 1. This popular event, returning for the first time since 2019, will likely sell out, so advance ticket purchase is recommended.

This will be a high-energy, family friendly event featuring a handful of local bands, each playing a set of different Beatles songs, culminating with the PNW's premiere Beatles cover band, JuJu Eyeball, performing a set. Song lyrics will be displayed on the large TV screens spread throughout The The Commonwealth Pub so that everyone can sing along — '60s attire is welcomed, so break out those tie-dyes and bell bottoms!

There will also be fun Beatles trivia, a selection of premium raffle items donated by local businesses and a silent auction of biddable items, including a lodging package valued at $1,100.

"We're really excited to continue the tradition of hosting this event which brings together supporters of KPOV and Beatles fans alike in an uplifting and positive celebration," says KPOV Board of Directors President Tim Cotter. "KPOV is sincerely grateful for all of the community support we have received from our loyal listeners and business partners for the past 21 years."

KPOV's first fundraiser Beatles Sing-Along was held in 2009, organized by the late Rick Miller, one of the founders of KPOV. The radio station began broadcasting live as a low-power station from its modest studios at 501 NW Bond St. in downtown Bend on June 26, 2005. POV stands for Point of View. In 2007, KPOV became the first local radio station to stream all its content online. Today, the station can be streamed on its website and on the free KPOV app.

Along with about 50 locally produced programs, KPOV also broadcasts live local, regional and national music events such as the Bend Roots Revival, the Riverfront Blues Festival from Portland and the New Orleans Jazz & Heritage Festival. There's a transmitter and antenna atop Pine Mountain, reaching to Redmond, Sisters, Prineville, Terrebonne and rural Central Oregon.

KPOV is a 24-hour, community effort, with a minimal paid staff and dozens of behind-the-scenes volunteers, including DJs, who all donate their time and energy. Locally produced music and talk shows cover local affairs, public health, national and international news, astrology and just about every genre of music. Several KPOV shows are syndicated nationally, while other shows attract an international following.

You "Can't Buy Me Love," but you can "Help" support your community radio station!

"Hey Jude," see you at the KPOV Beatles Sing-Along! RS

WELL-TRAVELED GUITARIST TO TOUCH DOWN IN REDMOND

DOMINICK ANTONELLI CONSIDERS HIMSELF AN ARTIST WHO UTILIZES A GUITAR

By Richard Sitts

Dominick Antonelli

Born and raised in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and now based in Fort Collins, Colorado, musician Dominick Antonelli says he is “beyond excited” to venture into the Pacific Northwest for the first time this summer. More specifically, he is excited to perform on Aug. 5 at General Duffy’s Waterhole in Redmond.

Antonelli says he also performs in yoga classes, local gigs around Colorado and workshops in which he incorporates “live music, meditation, group energy healing and writing into one experience.”

Checking in with the Source through email, he says he views himself “not as a guitar player, but an artist who utilizes the guitar and other forms to create an inspiring, healing, and contemplative experience for himself and listeners.” Antonelli has a background in integrative health and is currently studying Music and Recording Arts Technology.

When asked what the Redmond audience might expect from his performance, he says, “Oftentimes it sounds like there are two guitars playing at once. I use alternative tunings which often allow for a very full, encompassing sound with melodic textures over top. People have shared that they enjoy how my music feels organic and intuitive, rather than intellectual and theory driven. For me, it feels like a journey every time I get on stage and there are usually people in the audience who join in on the journey. People have shed tears, feeling moved and impacted in ways that bring inspiration and hope. I like to dance and really get into the performance, as well as tell stories and engage with the audience.”

Antonelli says he began playing guitar when he was 12. He has been writing original music for 15 years. “Playing guitar has been, and still is a form of therapy for myself. It allows me to enter into a space of timelessness, where I connect to a version of life that I have yet to find anywhere else. I play a mix of instrumental and vocal pieces that have been inspired by my travels, meditation and contemplative moments in my life.”

The worldly musician has also lived in Thailand, Costa Rica, Florida, New Jersey and Michigan. He says his parents introduced him to music when he was very young. “My earliest memories are listening to ‘Black Muddy River,’ ‘Touch of Grey’ and ‘When Push Comes to Shove’ (all Grateful Dead songs) in my dad’s truck going to learn how to ride my bike. My mom took me to James Taylor for my first concert — or America, I can’t quite recall.” He adds, “But I did go through quite a lot of trauma in my early years from 3 to 8-ish with domestic violence, sexual trauma, lots of addiction around me. So the guitar was a way for me to work out a lot of the things I didn’t know how to vocalize and shoved away.”

Judging from the talent on display in his YouTube videos, Antonelli has fashioned music to his advantage in the best possible way. IS

WORLD-CLASS MUSICIANS IN AN INTIMATE SETTING

THE SISTERS FOLK FESTIVAL CONTINUES PUTTING ON A GOOD TIME

By Nic Moye

The 29th Sisters Folk Festival will feature more than 30 diverse musical groups from all over the world. Organizers say the lineup redefines what folk music really means.

“Folk’ can be a polarizing word,” Communication Manager Erin Pihl says. “I think people still tend to think of the genre of folk music as old-timey... At SFF we try to break that mold and showcase artists that represents the full array of roots music.”

The event, Sept. 25-27, will be held in the heart of Sisters at seven venues including Sisters Art Works, Village Green, Oliver Lemon’s, The Belfry, Sisters Depot, Open Door and Sisters Saloon. The smallest venue has a capacity of 200, while the largest is 1,400.

Some of the highlights this year include Grammy Award winning Tommy Emmanuel from Australia who’s been dubbed one of the best acoustic guitarists in the world. Inspired by his mentor Chet Atkins, he set out as a solo artist in 1979 touring with greats like Eric Clapton and John Denver. Singer/songwriter Brandy Clark made the New York Times list of “30 Greatest American Songwriters.” Ozomatli will bring Latin, hip-hop and funk to Sisters. Performing for more than 30 years, the band continues creating new music that celebrates unity, resilience and joy. Thunderstorm Artis is a singer, songwriter and multi-instrumentalist who was a finalist on Season 18 of “The Voice” and has played alongside Jack Johnson, Train and The Zac Brown Band. The Paperboys have been called the Los Lobos of Canada. Forming in 1992, the sextet has performed at an estimated 4,300 shows. Scottish Fish is a Boston-based Celtic quintet with high energy. Gadan is a strings-only mashup of traditional Irish music and bluegrass. They started when three Italian folk musicians joined forces with Enda Scahill, a tenor banjo legend and added Eric Long, a songwriter/clawhammer banjo player from Pennsylvania.

“Our lineup always features a diverse group of artists celebrating music that can be defined as folk — of the people, for the people — but it never fits into one box or one genre. In a single year we’ll have everything from rockabilly blues and protest anthems to country-folk and Neo-soul to Irish trad and West African rock music,” Pihl says. IS

CASCADE CYCLING CLASSIC CRITERIUM

THE HIGH-OCTANE BICYCLE RACE SHOWCASE RETURNS TO DOWNTOWN BEND JUNE 21

By Peter Madsen

Horner Cycling Foundation

The whooshing racers. The unmistakable tung-tung-tung of shifting drivetrains, reverberating through state-of-the-art, carbon fiber road bikes. The electric jitters, the contagious joy of a racer's win.

In what's become a summer tradition going back decades, the Cascade Cycling Classic Criterium, presented by the Horner Cycling Foundation, returns to downtown Bend on June 21.

The criterium traces the same clockwise course it has for years: an L-shape along NW Wall Street, Oregon Avenue, Bond Street, Minnesota Avenue, Lava Road and Franklin Avenue. At nearly a mile per lap, the course is technical yet fast — a dynamic that pits powerhouse sprinters against the peloton's nimblest bike handlers.

Last year, about 155 racers competed, ranging in age and ability from 9-year-old kiddos to seasoned professionals. This year's prize purse is more than $20,000, which will get divvied up any number of ways according to race category; purse amounts are equal across gender according to category. There is also a non-binary 4/5 category.

"We have such a nice big prize purse," says Cogswell-Kelley. Podium finishers of the Pro 1/2 racers earn $3,000, $1,800 and $1,000, respectively. Each Pro 1/2 purse totals $8,550.

The race will function much as it did last year. The only tweak, Cogswell-Kelley says, is that the neutral support pit, made possible by Sagebrush Cycles, Shimano and Modus Sports, is closer to the start-finish line on NW Wall Street — not tucked along NW Franklin Avenue. Veteran race announcer and cycling historian Dave Campbell will resume his master of ceremony duties.

New this year is the Battle of the Bikes that, while contentious by name, is an all-bikes-welcome, 20-minute race that lets race-curious cyclists speed along the closed-course (no e-bikes allowed). Runners can also compete in the Bend Classic Mile Run along the CCC Criterium course.

The CCC Criterium is the largest fundraiser for the Horner Cycling Foundation, which offers free cycling development training to Central Oregon kids.

"The Cascade Cycling Classic Criterium gives local kids the opportunity to race on the big stage," Cogswell-Kelley said, adding that with 43 members, the foundation is the largest junior road racing team in Oregon.

Here's how criteriums work: Racers on road bikes lap a closed course as many times as they can in a time determined by their category, ranging from 20 minutes (the Kid-die Bike Sprint) to 80 minutes (the Open 1/2 race).

Attacks and counter attacks go back and forth — most fail when the peloton reigns them in. But break-aways do stick, often because racers on separate teams will work together for a chance to win primes (pronounced "preems"), or lap prizes denoted by an official's bell — if not the overall race itself.

Founded as the five-day stage race in 1980, the Cascade Cycling Classic came back as such after a several-year hiatus in 2019. The CCC has been a single-day event since 2024.

A summer program explores the Newberry Volcano, 20 miles south of Bend, the largest volcano by area in the Cascade Range. The two-day event June 25-26 includes contemporary dance inspired by the caldera, an evening of Northern Paiute stories, a geological exhibition and a guided tour of the volcano.

Oregon Origins Project is presenting “Echoes of Eruption.” The arts and culture nonprofit explores the origins of the state through creative expression. This is the first program the group has done in Central Oregon.

On Thursday, June 25, Wilson Wewa, the Northern Paiute tribe’s spiritual leader and an enrolled member of the Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs, will share oral histories, accounts of war and events related to the tribe’s presence on the land. On June 26, a dance, choreographed by Samuel Hobbs, will be performed by his company, push/FOLD. The work is meant to take the audience into the molten heart of Newberry, layering and folding bodies in a sculptural representation of churning magma with a musical soundscape described as evocative of the Big Obsidian Flow. Both programs, held at the Tower Theatre, will have a Q&A after the event. On June 27, Discover Your Northwest will offer a guided tour of Newberry for ticket holders of the previous two night’s events. In conjunction, a current exhibit at Scalehouse Collaborative for the Arts Annex Gallery explores geology and transformation through time. “Visual Echoes” will be open through June 26.

Newberry Volcano has an area of 1,200 square miles, including lava flows. From north to south, the volcano is 75-miles long by 27-miles wide. It was named after geologist John Strong Newberry, who surveyed the area for the Pacific Railroad in 1855. Paulina and East Lakes are within the caldera which is four by five miles in diameter. The rock age is about 500,000 years old.

Oregon Origins Project, headquartered in Portland, was founded in 2022 and provides a platform for Indigenous artists and culture bearers to share living traditions and artistic work. The “Echoes of Eruption” is its eighth project. TS

BEND CENTRAL DISTRICT'S FIRST BLOCK PARTY

THE ONE-DAY CELEBRATION WILL SHOWCASE THE TALENT OF ARTISTS FROM MULTIPLE DISCIPLINES

By Nic Moyer

openspace.studio

It's set to be the ultimate neighborhood block party: Bend's up and coming Central District is throwing a blowout celebrating the arts on Saturday, June 27. The area has some gems with Somewhere That's Green, Open Space Event Studios, Funky Fauna Artisan Ales and Dogwood at the Pine Shed bar and food cart lot. The event will invite visitors to all those spots while NE Second Street will be filled with vendors, entertainers, food and drinks.

Open Space Event Studio on NE Lafayette Avenue is partnering with Family Kitchen for an art gallery pop-up called "Nourish," with all proceeds supporting Family Kitchen. There will also be Oregon wine vendors. "People can walk around. It's kind of like a wine garden inside an art pop-up," Open Space Director Leah Rutz told the Source. "Then in our garage space...we're opening that up and doing garage theater. We have about four or five independent theater production companies doing small vignettes."

The festival's main stage will be located nearby with local musicians, including students from Cascade School of Music, as well as comedians, theater actors and other performers. Visitors can browse booths along Second Street, participate in hands-on art, watch performers from Lava City Cirque and High Desert Fire, sew something with Fashion for Everyone, a mobile sewing classroom, play games, visit with artisans, enjoy a kids zone, food and drinks.

Over at NE Second and Greenwood Avenue, John Kish, the founder of Somewhere That's Green, will also showcase artists. "I was thinking of putting an emphasis on the 75+ local ceramicists that we have, so emphasizing that kind of art form. And as far as the Greenhouse Cabaret goes, trying to keep educating people about what we're doing... Probably doing musical theater."

In addition to showcasing a variety of local talent, Rutz says the goal is to draw folks to the Bend Central District, which she describes as a community of collaboration. The area is an urban renewal district east of the Bend Parkway, south of NE Revere Avenue, west of NE Fourth Street and north of Burnside Avenue.

"Look where we've grown as a town that was kind of void of art not too long ago," Kish says. "I think of the BCD as kind of being the guiding force for that because it's one of the only affordable areas left for artists who rent spaces and studios in industrial spots. I think it's a really cool beginning to the long dream I think all of us have had for this district becoming an arts district."

A new pedestrian/bicycle bridge, Hawthorne Crossing, is in the works which will span from Second Street over the Bend Parkway to NW Hill Street, making the area more accessible and walkable. Construction is estimated to begin in fall 2027.

Organizers hope to make the BCD Block Party an annual event. "To highlight the diverse cultural piece that is the Central District. We are a very different part of town," Kish says. "We're going to highlight our unique history but also the future possibility."

THEATER IN THE PARK DEBUTS "THE PRODUCERS" THIS AUGUST

A MUSICAL COMEDY HELD IN DRAKE PARK'S AMPHITHEATER

By Ray Randall

David Thrower

For more than a decade theater has been performed in Bend's Drake Park. In August, Theater in the Park will put on the Tony Award-winning show, "The Producers," a Mel Brooks Broadway musical comedy.

The show follows two characters: a theater producer and an accountant doubling as an aspiring producer. The pair realize that it's more profitable to create a show that completely fails rather than one that prospers, so they conspire to create the worst show possible. The culmination of their creative labor is "Springtime for Hitler," imagining him as a good person. The play is taken for parody and is a commercial success.

The Source spoke with the co-directors, Desi Thrower and Michelle Mejaski, who each have decades of experience. Mejaski said that choreography — her specialty — is like directing with music.

Thrower discovered Theater in the Park shortly after moving to Bend from San Jose in 2021. She reached out and ended up meeting Mejaski. As co-directors, Thrower and Mejaski share overlapping responsibilities; costuming, set design and prop work, but Thrower is ultimately in charge. Mejaski jokingly called her the "top dog," but still acts as her right-hand, giving suggestions as needed. Thrower affectionately said Mejaski can turn anyone into a dancer. The two work together well.

"(If) she has a better idea than me, I'm like, 'Desi, bam. Awesome. Change it to that, yes.' And if I have an idea, she's like, 'Yeah, brilliant, I didn't think of that'... We're partners in every sense of the word. Partners and friends," Mejaski said.

They chose "The Producers" for its intensely comedic script and political relevance, stressing how much we need to laugh in today's world.

"There are people today who are Hitler-like in politics. And people hopefully can see some of the ridiculousness that's going on We need to pay attention," Thrower explained.

Having a show outdoors puts them at the mercy of the elements. Mejaski said, "Is it too hot? Is it too smoky? Is there a fire nearby? Is it freezing cold and like last year, will it rain? And all of that's beyond our control when the show must go on."

The shared amphitheater is heavily booked throughout the summer so Theater in the Park is limited by Bend Park and Recreation District to two days with two shows, which really impacts dress rehearsals.

Mejaski says the cast, crew and live musicians practice throughout the summer but "hell week," as Mejaski called it, typical for productions, is compressed into one day. All of the technical work, dress rehearsal, light, sound and costume checks are completed the day before opening night.

Editor's note: Theater in the Park is produced by Lay it Out Events, a sister company of the Source.
